REMEMBERING FALLEN COMRADES — From left, Frank Correira of Hanover, Floyd Shank of Plymouth and Jim Collins of North Dartmouth stand beside a pre-World War II C-45 prior to boarding the plane at Plymouth Airport Monday morning for a flight to Nantucket, where a wreath-dropping memorial ceremony was held over the ocean, just off the island. The C-45, owned and piloted by Robert Tringue of Plymouth, also carried Robert Keith of North Dartmouth to the area where three EC-121 H "Warning Star" Super Constellations from Otis Air Force Base went down in separate accidents in the mid-1960s, taking the lives of 50 officers and airmen. Monday's participants were former members of the 551st Airborne Early Warning & Control Wing at Otis.
